Training boosts morale and your staff are more motivated about work if you help them improve their skill sets. When you forecast your staff training needs in your annual business plan, please keep these points in mind:

1. Training emphasizes your priorities as staff can be directed toward specific training;
2. Training helps you keep pace with your changing business. You need to stay on top of new developments, new regulations and new procedures or techniques to stay competitive or in compliance;
3. Training shares good habits among staff and reinforces your best work. Once completed an employee who has attended training can lead a session for their colleagues when they return;
